

Triskellion celebrates 25 years

PICTURES BY BRENDAN VAUGHAN

THE Triskellion Theatre Company marked its 25th anniversary at a special reception held at the Irish Embassy in London.

Nottingham-based Gerry Molumby founded the organisation in 1994 and has worked with his London-based friend Patrick O'Connell OBE on the Company's productions.

This successful partnership has presented numerous plays over the years, by J. B. Keane, Sean O'Casey, John Millington Synge, Brendan Behan and Brian Friel.

The Company has also contributed to many Irish festivals in the UK under the banner of 'Celtic Strands' and have long associations with John Nolan at the Crawley Irish Festival and the Irish Rambling House tours to the UK.

They have showcased some of the finest Irish entertainment from Britain's Irish communities, including dancers, musicians, actors and comedians, along with some of Ireland's headline acts – such as the late Niall Tóibín, Philomena Begley, Finbar Furey, Sean Cannon of the Dubliners, Jimmy Cricket and Johnny McEvoy.

Gerry Molumby performing on the night for guests at the Irish Embassy

Right: Gerry's wife Fiona and son Cormac

Gerry Molumby, Aisling O'Neill and husband, Irish Ambassador Adrian O'Neill and Patrick O'Connell OBE

Seamus and Annette McGarry

Margaret McBreen and Tommy O'Flaherty

Gerry Molumby with Grace and John Collins

Entertaining the audience were Sean Cannon and his son Robert with Eilish Byrne-Whelehan